Let me Change Your Perspective on ADD!

Do you Struggle as a Parent?

- Do you dread morning and all the insanity it brings? Do you send your child off to school feeling once again like the “Parent of the Year” after all the nagging and yelling it takes to get him out the door on time?
- Does the thought of the bedtime hour approaching overwhelm you with a feeling of impending stress, knowing what it takes to get your kids into bed for the night—for good?
- Is homework more work for you than for your child? Does the thought of a long-term assignment or project fill you with fear and dread?
- Do you wish you didn’t have to repeat the same things, have the same arguments, and live the “same day” over and over and over again?
- Do you wonder how your children will be organized when you can’t get it yourself?
- Do you marvel at the “together” parents know whose kids go to school every day on time, in clean clothes, with perfectly groomed hair, tidy backpacks, fresh lunches, and a home-made craft or snack to share with the class?
